

Since 1998, ExamSoft has become the leader in assessment solutions, now with over 1,100 clients around the world. These are typically institutions of higher education, with a concentration in the health sciences, that deliver a diverse array of assessments. Of these 1,100 clients that ExamSoft delivers assessment solutions for, over 750 health science programs are included, as well as 44/50 state bar exams. We believe that we have achieved such impressive growth thanks in part to listening to clients' needs and developing solutions to address those needs. It is also a big reason for our remarkable 99% client retention rate.

ExamSoft strives to provide our assessment services equally to all students. Over the last few years, we have been working closely with clients to develop a system that provides an equal opportunity for students with visual or hearing impairments. This includes detailed work and audits via Student Disability and Compliance Offices at multiple institutions and in conjunction for testing and feedback provided by exam takers with disabilities during the development phases. While SofTest-M is our flagship tool for accessibility, our roadmap has committed to making our Mac and PC versions accessible by early 2017. In addition, faculty members have robust options for exporting exams built in the platform onto paper if needed.

Section 508 of the United States Rehabilitation Act outlines the requirements for making web sites accessible to individuals with disabilities. These standards detail how different components of web sites need to be designed to make the web content accessible. Under Section 508, the U.S. federal government has 16 standards that are used to define web accessibility, the attached Voluntary Product Accessibility Template (VPAT) document tells institutions how SofTest-M applies these standards.

ExamSoft is dedicated to evolving the platform as new accessibility requirements and technologies arise, and have resources internally tasked with the research and development of this functionality. If there are questions at any time regarding the functionality of the testing platform as it relates to accessibility needs, exam takers can contact our support line directly which is located on every institutions ExamSoft home page and administrators can email us directly at support@examsoft.com. Current client institutions have provided overwhelmingly positive reviews of how ExamSoft has built this fair testing solution for all students, in addition to our dedication of researching and adapting to requirements going forward.
